Not illustrated. 1855 Excerpt: . . . we have not in our dominions one man capable of unfolding the mystery of this marvellous game. To be compelled, sui it were, to acknowledge our inferiority, would leave an everlasting stain on the learned and the wise of Iran. Then Buzurjmihr had the chessboard and the pieces conveyed into a private chamber; and there he sat for the space of a day and a night, applying the irresistible powers of his penetrating intellect to the investigation of the principles and practice of the game. He examined with care the probable bearing of each piece, till at length the full light burst upon him. Then he hastened from his solitary chamber to the presence of Naushirwan, and thus spoke, O King of victorious destiny, I have carefully examined this board, and these pieces, and at length, by your Majestys good fortune, I have succeeded in discovering the nature of the game (a). It is a most shrewd and faithful repre supposed to have been built more than 1000 years before the Christian era, and to have been the capital of King Fur or Poms, who fought against the Macedonian hero, Alexander. The Indian histories are full of the accounts of its grandeur, extent, and populousness, so much so that in the sixth century--that is, about the time of Naushirwan--it was said to contain no fewer than 30, 000 shops, in which the Indian luxury, called Pan-supari, a peculiar preparation of the areca or betel-nut, was sold....
