Excerpt from A Summer Parish: Sabbath Discourses, and Morning Service of Prayer, at the Twin Mountain House, White Mountains, New Hampshire, During the Summer of 1874 For many years, Mr. Beecher has been accustomed to preach more or less in the neighborhoods which chanced to be his summer resting-places. During the past four summers he has taken refuge in the White Mountains from the annual hay-fever which relentlessly pursued him everywhere else; and, finding a congenial home at the Twin Mountain House, he has been in the habit of preaching to the large family of guests in the parlors each Sunday morning. For two summers, also, at the request of the guests, he has led the daily service of morning prayer, at the same time reading and familiarly commenting upon the Bible lesson. Finding so wide and grateful an appreciation of Mr. El linwoo d s reports of Mr. Beecher s sermons, prayers, and lecture-room talks - a feeling which seems to grow broader and deeper with each succeeding year, and which very many letters from subscribers to the Plymouth Pulpit and the Christian Union have shown to be especially notable during the present year, -the publishers thought it well last season to secure reports of these informal discourses and family services, in what Mr. Beecher pleasantly calls his summer parish. Hundreds of people, from every part of the land, and probably three of every other denomination to one of his own, were the friends who gathered every morning for the daily service of prayer, and every Sunday for the sermon. This little book is put forth in the confident hope that it will be welcome to...
