Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: .truly important until he has become duly and properly sick. Mrs. Puchu, his mother, had said wonderingly, to one of her neighbors, that with all her knowledge of Galen, that she candidly believed, she in reality knew little about him. She was almost sure that Galen could not tell the difference in taste between quinine and sugar, as she had never heard him express disgust at one, nor his pleasure in the taste of the other; that she was almost sure, from a previous experience that he could not tell the difference in odor from the smell of the most fragrant rose to that disgusting odor which came from a jimson weed. As for Galen's taste for music, he never had been responsive, and she was morally certain, that if life depended upon it, that she did not believe that Galen could tell the difference in tune from Home Sweet Home and that of the Arkansas Traveler. Galen in relation of his college career was certainly very egotistical, the I was continuously and exaltedly predominant. Well sir, he would say, when I attended college, I came very near leading that entire class; there was not a student who could touch me; old Professor L. said once that I was certainly the most thoroughly medical student that he had ever seen; that even my name, which he wrongfully pronounced Puke-u put him in mind of emesis, and I rather guessed it did, as I made them all somewhat nauseated at...
