*This publication will never be straightforward to get going on looking at but really fun to see. This can be for all those who statte that there had not been a worth looking at. You wont really feel monotony at at any moment of your own time (that's what catalogs are for about should you request me).

Excerpt: .of some 500,000 square miles, or an archipelago similar to the one lying north of western Canada. Upon the hypothesis of a deep and uninterrupted polar basin it is diiiiicult to account for the fact that the range of the semi-daily tide along the north coast of Alaska is only about a quarter as great as that at Bennett Island, near the New Siberian group. Dr. R. A. Harris, of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, who for years has studied the problems connected with the tides of the Arctic, has, even sketched an hypothetical continent within the unknown area. He has also shown that the diurnal tides along the north coast of Alaska have less than one half the rise and fall which the tidal forces acting over an uninterrupted basin would produce, and that the daily ebb and flow actually occurs earlier at Point Barrow than at Flaxman Island, 275 miles to the eastward, whereas with an open polar sea the reverse would be the case. On the other hand, Dr. Nansen, the Norwegian explorer, basing his belief upon soundings obtained during the drift of the Fram, insists that the area in question is a deep open basin. This ship, however, in its remarkable drift, barely skirted the region under discussion. At any rate, the aeroplane stands preeminent as a means for testing the validity of these theories, for it is absolutely impossible for ships or dog teams to penetrate far...
