Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from One Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Horace Greeley: First President of Typographical Union No; 6; New York Theatre; February 5, 1911 At the close of 1849 the New York Printers Union (which became Typographical Union No. 6 when the National Typographical Union was founded in 1852) was in a formative state. It had adopted a constitution, and under the provisions of that fundamental law the first regular session of the union convened at Stoneall s Hotel, 131 Fulton Street, on Saturday evening, January 19, 1850. The important business of that meeting was the election of officers for the succeeding yearly term. Horace Greeley had been invited to accept the Presidency of the young organization, and he had cheerfully consented to serve in that capacity. He was therefore chosen unanimously, as were also these other officers: Vice-President, Edgar H. Rogers; Recording Secretary, William H. Prindle; Financial Secretary, R. Cunningham; Corresponding Secretary, George Johnson; Treasurer, Thomas N. Rooker. It was quite natural for the organized printers to select Horace Greeley as their first presiding officer, because he already had been prominently identified with workingmen s movements in a number of trades to better their social and economic condition. He favored united action on their part. Not alone in the editorial columns of the Tribune did he urge that only through associated effort could they succeed in establishing wages at a standard that would permit them to preserve their homes and enjoy the comforts to which they and their families were entitled, but from the rostrum he eloquently espoused their cause, appealing to the public conscience to aid in the crusade for shorter working time, improved shop...
